1. One hour before the session of the East German Council of Ministers at 6 p.m. on 12 April 1955, the members of the Central Democratic Bloc held a meeting at which Ernst Wollweber, State Secretary for State Security, read the previously prepared decision of the Council of Ministers concerning espionage activity directed against East Germany [   ] 25X1

2. After Wollweber had read the proposed decision, a short discussion took place. Lothar Bolz, Minister of Foreign Affairs, Deputy Minister President and NDP representative in the Democratic Bloc, complained that the NDP had received no previous notice of the situation in question and of the measures to be taken, whereas the directorate of the LDP had been kept informed of the whole matter. Johannes Dieckmann took exception to this remark, stating that the LDP had received no information which was not also available to the other members of the Bloc.

3. Otto Nuschke, Deputy Minister President and CDU Bloc representative, suggested that in the future the responsible leadership of all parties be informed by the Secretariat for State Security whenever the SfS suspected that any important individual was engaged in espionage activity, so that the individual could be gotten rid of in time, or at least so that no important material would fall into his hands. To this suggestion an unidentified speaker stated that it could certainly not be expected that the SfS would lay all its cards on the table in this fashion.[2]

4. To the exasperation of the other participants in the meeting, Nuschke next gave a long and wandering account of how [   ] someone had written "Traitor!" or some such epithet on the walls of Nuschke's house.
He stated that he had been in the USSR when [   ] took place and when he returned he checked carefully and found that [   ] had not been based upon truth.

1. [   ] Comment. Contrary to the usual practice at Bloc sessions, no refreshments were served at this meeting and all service employees were excluded.
Special security measures were also taken at the subsequent meeting of the Council of Ministers.

2.   [   ]   Comment. This naive statement attributed to Nuschke and the alleged reaction to it would seem to indicate that Nuschke is perhaps becoming senile and will no longer be taken seriously.
